NATIONAL CANINE DIVISION
2023 PLANNER

Canine Training Center

ATF

ATF's National Canine Division is the leading federal expert for law enforcement in the area of explosives and accelerant detection canines. The division was established in 1995 to support a variety of law enforcement operations including bombing, arson, explosives, and firearms investigations. ATF explosives detection canine teams also conduct protective sweeps at National Security Special Events.

The ATF National Canine Division is recognized for its scientifically based program solely operated by law enforcement personnel. Our canine teams go through an intense training program. ATF-trained explosives detection canines can detect a multitude of explosive materials, and the accelerant detection canines can detect numerous ignitable liquids in post-fire environments.

The ATF National Canine Division also offers external training to state and local law enforcement canine teams such as the National Odor Recognition Training and Testing \(NORT\), Homemade Explosives Imprinting, and regional scenario-based training deliveries in various locations nationwide.

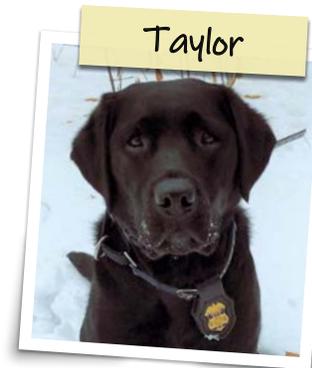

ATF conducts explosives detection, accelerant detection and Search Enhanced Evidence K-9 \(S.E.E.K.\) training programs at the Canine Training Center located in Front Royal, Virginia. Currently, ATF has more than 60 accelerant detection canine teams with state and local partners nationwide, and 113 explosives detection canine teams nationwide consisting of 40 S.E.E.K., 47 other federal agency, and 26 state and local canine teams.

★ Taylor's Favorite Things:
 When she is not working, K-9 Taylor enjoys hanging out with her friend retired ATF K-9 Brock.
