Volume IV of the National Firearms Commerce and Trafficking Assessment concludes the most comprehensive analysis of firearms in the United States ever completed. The publication of the four Volumes of this assessment was accomplished through the commitment and dedication of the people who collected, analyzed, and validated the data. ATF would like to acknowledge the assistance of those who made pivotal contributions to further our understanding of the complex issues involving firearm commerce, legislation, and law enforcement in the U.S.

The cornerstone of this effort was the partnership between ATF and members of academic institutions. Sincere thanks to our academic partners who provided significant guidance throughout the NFCTA project. Specifically, Dr. Anthony Braga, Department of Criminology, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Glenn Pierce, School of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Northeastern University; Dr. Alaina De Biasi, Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Wayne State University; and, Dr. Lisa Barao, Crime and Justice Policy Lab, University of Pennsylvania. In addition, the NFCTA project team relied upon Ret. ATF Special Agent Dale Armstrong for his expertise and acumen. The report benefited from a detailed review and critical commentary by Dr. Garen Wintemute, Department of Emergency Medicine, University of California – Davis, and Dr. Philip J. Cook, Sanford School of Public Policy, Duke University.

Over the last three years, other federal agencies provided outstanding support, particularly the Federal Bureau of Investigation (Criminal Justice Information Services) by supplying ATF with data related to the theft of firearms from individuals. ATF also appreciates the Office of Justice Programs, National Institute of Justice for managing the resources required to ensure the success of this project.

Finally, during the production of the four volumes, critical assistance and subject matter expertise was provided by ATF special agents, industry operations investigators, attorneys, and other officials representing virtually every Directorate within ATF. We are grateful to them all. Among the many who made substantial contributions, special thanks are due to Joe Allen, Acting Chief of Staff/Senior Counsel to the Director; Marianna Mitchem, Associate Assistant Director (Industry Operations); Christopher Sharp, Industry Operations Program Manager; and Brian Kenrick, Senior Attorney. ATF is indebted to these individuals for embracing significant collateral duties and their tireless effort and commitment to the NFCTA project.
