

Whistleblower Information

For employees of DOJ contractors, subcontractors, grantees, subgrantees, or personal services contractors

Whistleblowers perform an important service to the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the public when they come forward with what they reasonably believe to be evidence of wrongdoing. They should never be subject to reprisal for doing so.

Federal law protects federal employees against reprisal for whistleblowing. In addition, under Title 41, United States Code, Section 4712, it is illegal for an employee of a Federal contractor, subcontractor, grantee, subgrantee, or personal services contractor to be discharged, demoted, or otherwise discriminated against for making a protected whistleblower disclosure.

The Department of Justice Office of the Inspector General (DOJ OIG) has jurisdiction to investigate allegations of reprisal for whistleblowing by employees of DOJ contractors, subcontractors, grantees, or subgrantees or personal services contractors. Information on how to report suspected reprisal to the OIG is available at: <https://oig.justice.gov/hotline/>.

Who is a whistleblower?

A whistleblower is an employee of a Federal contractor, subcontractor, grantee, subgrantee, or personal services contractor who discloses information that the individual reasonably believes is evidence of:

- Gross mismanagement of a federal contract or grant;
- A gross waste of Federal funds;
- An abuse of authority relating to a Federal contract or grant;
- A substantial and specific danger to public health or safety; or
- A violation of law, rule, or regulation related to a Federal contract (including the competition for or negotiation of a contract) or grant.

To whom must the disclosure be made to be protected?

To be protected under Section 4712, a disclosure must be made to one of the following:

- A Member of Congress, or a representative of a committee of Congress;
- The OIG;
- The Government Accountability Office (GAO);
- A Federal employee responsible for contract or grant oversight or management at the relevant agency;
- An authorized official of the DOJ or other law enforcement agency;
- A court or grand jury; or
- A management official or other employee of the contractor, subcontractor, grantee, subgrantee, or personal services contractor who has the responsibility to investigate, discover, or address misconduct.

Disclosures involving classified information should be made in accordance with otherwise applicable laws, and individuals should consult with the OIG to ensure that such disclosures to it are made appropriately.

What can I do if I believe retaliation has occurred?

Employees of contractors, subcontractors, grantees, subgrantees, or personal services contractors may file a complaint under Section 4712 with the OIG, which will investigate the matter unless the OIG determines that the complaint is frivolous, fails to allege a violation of the prohibition against whistleblower reprisal, or has been addressed in another proceeding. Upon completion of its investigation, the OIG will submit a report of its findings to the person, the contractor or grantee concerned, and the head of the agency.

If you are an employee of the DOJ, or of a DOJ contractor, subcontractor, grantee, subgrantee, or personal services contractor, and you suspect that an action affecting your access to classified information has been taken against you in reprisal for participating in a protected activity (e.g., disclosing wrongdoing), you may report it to the OIG.

Nothing in a non-disclosure agreement should be interpreted as limiting your ability to provide information to the OIG.
